Group B Streptococcal Infections in Infants and Children: A Primer for Diagnosis and Treatment. Group B Streptococcus (GBS) is a leading cause of severe, invasive infections among infants and children worldwide. In the United States, there were 11,400 invasive infections reported to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) in 2011 and 2180 deaths, mainly among infants. Virtually all strains are susceptible to penicillin, but there have been increasing reports of β -lactam resistance in recent years. Penicillin-susceptible, late-onset disease is often successfully treated with intrapartum antibiotic prophylaxis. In contrast, penicillin-resistant, early-onset disease typically requires surgical treatment. Maternal immunization with a single dose of intrapartum benzathine penicillin protects 80% to 90% of infants for at least 2 years. However, GBS is a dynamic, rapidly evolving organism. Therefore, the prevention of early-onset disease remains challenging. New maternal and infant GBS vaccines are in development.
