In Team Fortress 2, when you're standing on a light blue box (or light blue line), I noticed that a text saying "light blue" comes up with a light blue box. What does that mean? Is it just some flag I have to check? A: It's a secure way of telling the server to focus your team's attention on a particular area of the map. From this you can: keep track of items or people you want on your team (or your enemy's team) hire heroes to kill people in that area This is a reference to the Blue Box Trophies and the Blue Box mode in the original TF2. A: Generally speaking, this means something to do with your team or the enemy team. It could be that they want to let you or someone on the enemy team know a person is there or something is there. I don't know for sure, but if you are on the enemy team, you could just be trying to tell them to move out of there. Or if your team is trying to run out of that area, they could tell you to get out of there. It's a little dangerous because the other team might attack you for being out there. To be safe, you should only be on the light blue boxes you know 3da54e8ca3
