ARTEFACTS

STORY

The Tarnished Ring, a very old legend, has existed for centuries- while it remains, the world of fantasy continues. So the world had forgotten it until now, and for that reason it was not announced to the outside world- In the long history of humanity, there was no instance of someone possessing the artifact.

Inside the ring lies a story of how the people who witnessed the Tarnished Ring were born into the world, and that is the reason it is called "The Tarnished Ring." While inhabiting the lands, adventurers caused these tales to be recorded. By doing so, the people who drew the history onto paper, precisely and beautifully, had a dream as their goal-in order to save their lands.

The dream of the adventurers, however, did not last.

With time, the ring was stolen into a small walled village, and for that reason it left unaltered, and came to be known as the Tarnished Ring.

At the end of the aforementioned story, the Tarnished Ring appeared in a dream for the first time.

At that time, it appeared to the protagonist and the other characters in a split-screen field, and said, "You will carry on its saga. There is an adventure waiting for you."

NEXT TIME...

As you can see, a new adventure is on the way.

I hope you look forward to it.

John F. O'DonnellReuters Listen Listening... / Originally published on March 29, 2019 7:08 pm Apple's CarPlay technology, which means "Play and Drive" in a car context, is integrated into thousands of smartphones and many cars. It alerts drivers, using the car's infotainment screen, of upcoming road conditions. It offers navigation information, and it adds Siri, the voice-activated assistant in the iPhone. But a new Associated Press story today says some cars from 2018 and older can be a safety risk. "We are not suggesting that CarPlay is a safety issue," says John Castellaw, chief engineer at Ford. "CarPlay is not unsafe.... A Ford vehicle is safe to operate." But the AP says "too many carmakers have not yet updated software on millions of vehicles to integrate updated CarPlay technology into new cars and information about the cars poses a potential safety risk, such as confusing the map system with the navigation system. This could lead to accidents." The U.S. National Highway Traffic Safety Administration agrees that the CarPlay feature, though it was originally introduced as an optional feature in 2018, has expanded. NHTSA says "the percentage of vehicles that have fully certified CarPlay solutions has grown from about half a million at the end of 2018 to more than 4.5 million today." The agency says it met with Apple to discuss a car crash that occurred after a driver looking at her phone hit an in-progress deer while driving. Apple said in a statement that it "is always working to enhance CarPlay and the process to certify a car with CarPlay is no different than certifying a smartphone." NHTSA says it is continuing to monitor how CarPlay is being used. The agency's priority is to prevent accidents
